

24th Annual Resident Poster Day

October 12, 2021

Alexandra France, MD

Crohn's disease is a systemic inflammatory disease characterized predominantly by gastrointestinal symptoms but also various extra-intestinal manifestations. This case highlights psoas abscesses as one such complication. Psoas abscesses are either primary, resulting from hematogenous or lymphatic spread, or secondary resulting from direct spread into the psoas